Queensland Kendo Renmei First Aid Support Policy

The QKR executive takes the safety of its members seriously and in line with coaching requirements and good policy we hope to encourage members to become first aid officers.

Our aim is to have at least 2 qualified first aid officers at all Queensland Kendo Renmei clubs and subsequently at all QKR events.

To achieve this, the QKR will provide support to a maximum value of $160.00, to members that undertake a first aid course and stipulate to meet the below requirements.
It also recognizes the effort and time that members give up completing the first aid course.

- The QKR will provide this support to members able to provide first aid support to their club for no less than 1 year.
- Failure to do so would involve a repayment of any support provided by the QKR under this scheme.
- No single member can apply for support more than once every 3 years.
- RBAC renewal is at member's own expense.

The QKR secretary will maintain a list of members holding current first aid certification and when it was achieved.

- This money is only to be used for first aid training and is payable after successful completion of course and presentation of relevant certificate and invoice to the QKR treasurer.
- In making application and accepting support members agree that should they not be able to meet the required return of service obligation that repayment of funds is expected.

Considering the number of clubs in the Renmei it may be possible that 2 members from each club may be able to take this opportunity, however this is determined by demand and budget constraints.
